NORTHEAST STUDENT COALITION

AGAINST APARTHEID & RACISM

The Northeast Student Coalition Against Apartheid and Racism (Northeast SCAR) is a new regional network linking students active on about 20 campuses in the Northeast. The network was established at a meeting on March 14, 1987, held at Hunter College in New York City.

The campus movement against apartheid and racism continues to forge ahead and to develop innovative tactics and creative strategies. Some college groups, having achieved divestment, are joining forces with community organizations and targetting banks or corporations, or working on local issues such as tenants rights. Others continue to face repression from the administration and need the support of other campuses.

Racism and racist violence is on the rise on campuses across the country. Recent attacks at Columbia, Ann Arbor, Amherst, and others have shown the need for decisive action not only against racist violence, but for measures which will address the needs and concerns of Black and Third World students on campus. The climate of "whites only" on many college campuses and insensitivity or outright attack towards minorities has helped to create an atmosphere which fosters racism.

We need to unite and deal with all of these issues, and to facilitate the growth of our movement. Some of Northeast SCAR's future plans include a student newsletter, speaking tours, corporate campaigns and material aid drives.

Join Northeast SCAR! We are open to any campus group active on the issues of apartheid and racism. Help to build this network and the student movement.
