The Southern Africa Educational Campaign (SAEC) is being sponsored by a coalition of U.S. NGOs who educate the U.S. public on development issues in Southern Africa. The campaign, which will kickoff in April and run through December 31, 1994, seeks to:

- educate the American public, media and policy makers about issues of sustainable development in Southern Africa and the impact of U.S. policies in the region;
- build a strong and lasting U.S. constituency to support economic and social justice in Southern Africa, and;
- strengthen and expand partnerships between African NGOs and US NGOs and enhance the capacities of each.

It will do this through a variety of activities, including: community-based educational events, a national media campaign, a campus-based organizing drive and the development and distribution of educational materials.

Members of the SAEC Steering Committee include: African-American Institute, Africare, Africa Policy Information Center, Bread for the World, Center of Concern and the Washington Office on Africa.

Anyone interested in participating in the campaign or receiving further information can contact the Coordinator, Lisa Cannon at 110 Maryland Avenue, NE - Suite 112, Washington, DC 20002 Tel. (202) 546-7961 Fax (202) 546-1545.
