The International Nelson Mandela Reception Committee (IRC) was launched January 8, 1990, and is headquartered in London, England. It's convener is Archbishop Trevor Huddleston, CR. The initiative was taken following consultations with the leaders of the African National Congress of South Africa and has its full support. The aim of the IRC is to celebrate the imminent release of Nelson Mandela. It is not envisaged that the Committee should supplant existing structures, but rather act to provide a framework for coordinated activity around the release of Nelson Mandela in the coming months. An Ad Hoc committee has been formed in New York to coordinate local activities.
