FOLLOWING THE WEAPONS TRAIL ...

FROM WATERVLIET TO SOUTH AFRICA!

There is a chain of international intrigue, beginning at the Watervliet Arsenal and running to a small Vermont town that straddles the American-Canadian border.

It is a chain that stretches as far as South Africa, which received weapons produced at the Arsenal and sold in violation of an American embargo.

And, according to congressional investigators, questions have been raised about the possible involvement of government officials in the chain.
