Stop Rhodesian Imports

LONGSHOREMEN HONOR INTERNATIONAL LAW:
U.S. GOVERNMENT DEFIES IT!

Six years ago the United States imposed a total trade embargo on the illegal, racist regime of the white settler minority in the south African country of Rhodesia. Two years ago, the U.S. Congress, with the support of President Nixon, formally decided to ignore that resolution.

Philadelphia longshoremen, encouraged and supported by the Coalition to Stop Rhodesian Imports, joined in the nationwide campaign by refusing to unload Rhodesian goods.

But we need more help!

We need support on the picket lines, in spreading the news of their action, and in building pressure on the Congress to reinstate the embargo. This action is important to all U.S. workers — large U.S. companies have closed shops here, throwing people out of work, and reopened them in Rhodesia, to take advantage of the near slavery conditions under which Africans live. (Average African wage: $50 per month; average white wage: $700 per month.)
