"Total Strategy": Apartheid's Regional War is an education for action symposium sponsored by the Washington Office on Africa Educational Fund (WOAEP). It is designed to provide activists, legislators, scholars, anti-apartheid groups, students and the media with an in-depth analysis of South Africa's destabilization of its neighbors. South Africa has used military aggression and economic destabilization to exploit its neighbors and to keep them economically dependent. U.S. policy in the region will be examined, also. The panels feature experts and authors who have lived and worked in Southern Africa, representatives of countries in the region, anti-apartheid organizers and congressional staff members. The major objectives of the event are:

- to draw the attention of the general public, anti-apartheid activists, the U.S. Congress and the media to the regional impact of apartheid.
- to deepen awareness of the growing economic and political crisis in Southern Africa resulting from apartheid's war.
- to evaluate US policy towards South Africa and the region and to suggest policy alternatives.

The First Annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Symposium on Southern Africa
B: SPECIAL TARGETS OF SOUTH AFRICAN AGGRESSION: ANGOLA AND MOZAMBIQUE

Moderator: Dr. Sylvia Hill, Free South Africa Movement Steering Committee, Co-Chair, Southern Africa Support Project.
Participants:
His Excellency Valeriano Ferrao, Ambassador of the People's Republic of Mozambique.
Kathy Flewelling, Associate Director, Washington Office, American Friends Service Committee.

This panel will discuss how "TOTAL STRATEGY" is being carried out against the two Frontline States which are bearing the brunt of South Africa's destabilization policies. Speakers will discuss the economic, social and military conditions arising from destabilization and the foreign policy of these two nations towards South Africa.

The Washington Office on Africa Educational Fund (WOAEF) was established in 1980 to organize educational events and to produce resources on Southern Africa. WOAEF organizes major educational events like the Martin Luther King, Jr. Symposium on Southern Africa and it also plans smaller events for anti-apartheid and other interested groups. WOAEF has published many topical and timely fact sheets. It has produced popular information packets on South Africa and Namibia. WOAEF does research on U.S. policy and developments in Southern Africa. You can make a difference! Support the work of the Washington Office on Africa Educational Fund with your contribution.

This panel will discuss South Africa's continued illegal occupation of Namibia and how Pretoria utilizes its control of that nation to carry out its destabilization policies against Angola and other countries in the region. The impact of South Africa's use and occupation of Namibia on the lives of Namibian people will also be addressed.

This panel will consider strategies for anti-apartheid groups to address South Africa's regional aggression and intensified internal repression. Ways in which the movement can integrate an increased focus on Namibia and support for the Frontline States and SADCC as part of anti-apartheid work will be discussed. Divestment, boycott, legislative, educational and mobilization campaigns will be addressed as well. This panel will review the current stage of the U.S. movement, and propose strategies for future growth and development of the broad U.S. anti-apartheid movement.
It is important that we meet at this time of South Africa's most massive crackdown ever. Children, churches, labor unions, and anti-apartheid groups are suffering from Pretoria's oppressive response to the unrelenting popular opposition to its policies. At the same time, South Africa's attempts to protect white domination are inflicting unprecedented suffering on the people of Southern Africa.

I have been impressed by the enthusiastic response of people from a variety of different communities; academic, religious, anti-apartheid, human rights, development, diplomatic and Congressional. Your response to the symposium is indicative of the extent to which people in different disciplines share a deep concern for the freedom, peace, and development of Southern Africa, as well as the growing consensus that South African apartheid, expressed as a program of regional domination, wreaks havoc and death throughout the region. I hope that you will be better informed by the symposium about "Apartheid's War", but even more, I hope that you will be strengthened in your resolve to help end U.S. support for apartheid's policies in Southern Africa.

Many, many people have worked hard to bring us all together. Some you will know because they will speak to us. Many helpers, whom you may never know, have put in long hours doing the hundreds of things that have to be done before a meeting like this can come to pass. I wish to express my gratitude to all who have helped, and to you who have come to participate.

Mayibuye iAfrika!

The Washington Office on Africa (WOA), a national Southern Africa lobby, was founded in 1972 and is supported by US churches and trade unions. WOA convenes the Southern Africa Working Group (a coalition of over 100 national organizations) and services a grassroots network. WOA sponsors Congressional briefings on legislation and coordinates lobbying in support of comprehensive sanctions against South Africa, aid to Southern Africa, freedom for Namibia, and the termination of US support to South African backed rebels in Angola. It publishes a newsletter, Washington Notes on Africa.
