National Student Anti-apartheid Protest Day!

Students all across America are taking a stand against apartheid. Ever increasing numbers of us are rising up to protest American institutions that help underwrite the apartheid system in South Africa. At Berkeley, Columbia, Cornell, Princeton, Rutgers and Santa Cruz, students have taken action. We demand that our Universities end their economic collaboration with the racist regime in Pretoria. We stand together in solidarity with the 23 million blacks in South Africa. We urge our fellow students to join us in awakening the moral conscience of the nation and the world. We are calling on students across the country to participate in a national day of protests for divestment this Wednesday, April 24. We call on groups to organize rallies and direct action blockades similar to ours.
