Dear friend:

This letter is to invite you to an excellent documentary movie on South Africa - the CBS Sabotage in South Africa - to be shown in Princeton on March 21. The movie will be introduced by Dr. Richard A. Falk, Miglibank Professor of International Law and Practice at Princeton University. Dr. Falk has just returned from South Africa where he was the official observer for the International Commission of Jurists at the "terrorism" trial of South West Africans in Pretoria.

March 21 has been designated "International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination" by the United Nations in memory of the notorious shootings at Sharpeville, South Africa on that date in 1960. Sharpeville has become a symbol to the world of the racial animosity and discrimination in Southern Africa. Aside from the significance of the date, the 53-minute movie provides a vivid, reliable and well-photographed presentation of contemporary questions. We have invited Mr. Morley Nkosi from South Africa to answer questions after the film.

If you are unable to attend the movie but are concerned about the situation in Southern Africa, please write to us to that effect so that we may contact you when another activity is planned.
