Today the People's Republic of Mozambique is under siege. South African-backed groups dubbed MNR or RENAMO but called "bandidos armados" by people in the country, have destroyed more than 1,800 primary schools, 720 health clinics, 900 private shops, and 1,300 transport vehicles. Nearly six million people are affected by South Africa's brutal policy of destabilization. Many of these are children. UNICEF estimates that 325,000 children have died as a result of RENAMO, and 200,000 children either saw their parents killed or do not know their whereabouts. Millions of Mozambicans are suffering from severe food shortages. Over one million are displaced and without shelter. Apartheid's terrorists must be stopped!

SUPPORT SANCTIONS against SOUTH AFRICA
Who are the killers? Why Sanctions?

South Africa continues to deny that it has any connections to the Mozambique National Resistance (MNR or RENAMO), but Mozambicans know otherwise. A London-based publication, Africa Confidential, reported that "South Africa recruits, trains...and supplies" the terrorists in Mozambique "by air, sea, and land. South African Special Forces' sabotage experts undertake missions inside Mozambique which are beyond RENAMO's technical competence, and these are then attributed to RENAMO." (2 DEC 1987)

RENAMO's most publicized attacks are as follows:
- 18 July 1987, several hundred RENAMO guerillas, armed with automatic weapons, bayonets, and machetes, raided the town of Homoine and killed over 400 men, women, and children;
- 10 August 1987, RENAMO guerillas attacked the town of Manjacaze and killed 90 civilians and destroyed civilian energy supplies;
- 31 October 1987, RENAMO guerillas burned buses that were crowded with unarmed civilians, killing at least 211 people in the same region.*
- South Africa continues to assist RENAMO despite signing the 1984 Nkomati Accord which stipulated that South Africa cease providing such assistance. (Senate Resolution 91; House Resolution 189)

The United States government denounces apartheid, but major business transactions continue to take place between the two countries. And major U.S.-S.A. intelligence linkages help South Africa assist RENAMO.
