MAYORS, ENTERTAINERS, RELIGIOUS LEADERS PROTEST FAILURE TO RELEASE SOUTH AFRICAN POLITICAL PRISONERS

The mayors of some of the largest cities in the U.S. have sent letters to the South African Ambassador to the U.S. Harry Schwarz strongly protesting his government's failure to live up to its agreement to release all political prisoners by April 30th. New York Mayor David Dinkins, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley and Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn are among the mayors who wrote to Ambassador Schwarz demanding that the apartheid government immediately release the thousands of political prisoners still being held in violation of the agreement between South African President F.W. de Klerk and ANC Deputy President Nelson Mandela.

Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley wrote that "Only when all political prisoners have been released and the apartheid system has been replaced with a democratic form of government can South Africa rejoin the family of nations."

Mayor Raymond Flynn wrote "Boston welcomed the release of Nelson Mandela last year and his visit to our city will long be remembered. We continue to support him in his efforts to end apartheid and to establish a democratic nonracial state."

The mayors cited their cities' strong anti-apartheid policies, including divestment of city pension funds from companies which do business in South Africa and restricting city purchases from these companies. "You are no doubt aware that I personally hosted Nelson Mandela last year during his visit to the City," wrote Mayor Dinkins. "I believe that Nelson Mandela is free today, in some small part, because of the actions taken by this jurisdiction over the years."

Members of Artists for a Free South Africa, which includes such prominent entertainers as Denzel Washington and Danny Glover, also sent letters to Ambassador Schwarz. "The fact that the South African government is so reluctant to free all political prisoners demonstrates the government is not committed to a truly free and democratic form of government," said actress Alfre Woodard. "As Nelson Mandela told me in a recent letter, it is important to keep the pressure on apartheid and maintain sanctions."

Dr. Charles Adams, president of the Progressive National Baptist Convention and Dr. Wyatt Tee Walker, chair of the national Religious Action Network for Peace With Justice in Southern Africa were among the religious leaders to send letters.

"The South African Government is not living up to its commitment to release all political prisoners," said Jennifer Davis, Executive Director of the American Committee on Africa, the nation's oldest anti-apartheid organization, who coordinated the protest. "On April 23rd, the Human Rights Commission, which monitors political prisoners in South Africa, reported that more than 2,000 political prisoners remain in jail. That same day, South African President F.W. de Klerk claimed that all but 200 prisoners had been released."

She noted that three of the cities, New York, Los Angeles and Boston hosted Nelson Mandela on his visit to the U.S., saying "Just as international pressure helped bring about the release of Nelson Mandela, it can help win freedom for all apartheid's political prisoners and contribute to the victory of democracy in South Africa."

Dear Ambassador Schwarz:

As you assume your responsibilities as Ambassador for South Africa to the United States, I wanted to raise with you my concern that your government has not yet released all political prisoners.

First, it is important to let you know that both I personally and the City of Los Angeles have long opposed apartheid. Our city pension funds have adopted a policy of not investing in any company doing business in South Africa. Los Angeles also has a policy of giving preference in city contracts to companies that do not do business in South Africa; last November the voters passed a referendum to expand this policy.

I write you now because I am concerned that human rights organizations in South Africa report that up to 3,000 political prisoners remain in jail. It is my understanding that, in terms of agreements between the government you represent and the democratic movement represented by the African National Congress, all political prisoners, including those on death row, will be released by April 30, 1991.

Los Angeles welcomed the release of Nelson Mandela last year, and his visit to our city will long be remembered. We continue to support him in his efforts to end apartheid and to establish a democratic, non-racial South Africa. However, apartheid cannot be ended while other political prisoners remain in jail. Only when all political prisoners have been released and the apartheid system has been replaced with a democratic form of government can South Africa rejoin the family of nations. The people of Los Angeles look forward to the South African government fulfilling its commitment and releasing all political prisoners by April 30th.
I urge you to convey to your government our concern that all political prisoners be released by April 30th, as an essential step in the process of establishing a democratic South Africa.

Sincerely,

TOM BRADLEY
Mayor

Dear Ambassador Schwarz:

As you assume your responsibilities as ambassador of South Africa to the United States, I wanted to raise with you my concern that the agreement between Nelson Mandela and the government of South Africa that all political prisoners be freed by April 30 is a commitment that will be fulfilled.

It is important to let you know that the people of Boston and their elected leaders have been active opponents of apartheid for many years. Boston has a long standing policy which bars the purchase of goods from South Africa and mandates divestment from companies that do business in South Africa. Last year, I went to Washington to urge Congress to keep sanctions against South Africa until democracy has been established.

I am writing now because of my concern that, according to human rights organizations in South Africa, up to 3,000 political prisoners remain in jail. It was my understanding that, as a result of agreements between the government you represent and the democratic movement represented by the African National Congress, all political prisoners, including those on death row, were to be released by April 30th.

Only when all political prisoners have been released and the apartheid system has been replaced with a democratic form of government can South Africa rejoin the family of nations.
I urge you to convey to your government our concern that all political prisoners be released immediately, as an important first step in the process of establishing a democratic South Africa.

Sincerely,

Ray Flynn

Dear Ambassador Schwarz:

As you assume responsibility as South African Ambassador to the United States, permit me to raise with you my grave concern regarding the fate of thousands of political prisoners remaining in South African jails.

As you may know, the City of New York has been an active opponent of apartheid for many years. You are no doubt aware that I personally hosted Nelson Mandela last year during his visit to the City. And I believe that Mr. Mandela is free today, in some small part, because of the actions taken by this jurisdiction over the years.

For these reasons, I am concerned that human rights organizations in South Africa report that nearly 3,000 political prisoners continue to languish in South African jails. It is my understanding that during negotiations between your government and the African National Congress, it was agreed that all political prisoners would be released by April 30, 1991. You must know that as that date fast approaches, the world is watching to see if the Pretoria government will make good on its promise.

I urge you to convey to your government the critical importance of releasing all political prisoners immediately in order that good faith negotiations towards democratic rule can proceed.

Sincerely,

David N. Dinkins
Mayor
Dear Mr. Ambassador,

More than a year ago, your government promised to release all political prisoners from Apartheid's jails by April 30, 1991. This was one of the minimum conditions for negotiations accepted by your government and Nelson Mandela and endorsed by among others, the United Nations, the European Economic Community, and the Organization of African Unity.

Despite the failure of your government to meet these conditions, the ANC suspended all facets of its armed struggle as a show of good faith in the negotiating process.

Over 2,500 people who should be free remain locked in your Apartheid jails. Worst still, you continue with political trials, creating even more prisoners of Apartheid!

WE, THE CONGREGATION OF THE CHURCH OF INTERCESSION--

DEMAND THAT ALL POLITICAL PRISONERS OF APARTHEID BE RELEASED BY APRIL 30!

Sincerely,

Dear Ambassador Schwarz:

Last year, the South African government agreed to the speedy release of all political prisoners as a step toward ending apartheid. With only days remaining until the April 30, 1991 deadline, nearly three thousand such prisoners remain behind bars.

Merely releasing a small fraction of these prisoners is not enough. Concerned citizens of the United States, such as ourselves, will not allow our government to lift sanctions against South Africa unless the remaining prisoners are freed as promised.

The economic and political pressure on South Africa will continue until all necessary steps are taken to dismantle apartheid and establish a one-person, one-vote democratic system of rule.
