CONTROL AND REPRESSION

THE LAW: The government has the right to ban or place under house arrest anyone considered likely to further any aim of “communism,” which, as defined, includes stirring up race antagonisms. A banned person must stay in a certain area, may not attend meetings, or meet with other banned people. Banned Africans may be banished to remote areas. The government may detain anyone for 180 days without trial. Those arrested under the Terrorism Act may be detained indefinitely in solitary confinement. Africans at all times must carry passbooks which include work and living permits; failure to produce a passbook on demand is ground for arrest.

DETENTION:
—As of April 1977, more than 1,000 persons were known to have been detained since January 1975. That number included at least 150 children under 16. —Focus 10 May '77
—As of March 25, 1977, 471 persons were believed to be in detention, among them at least 133 students. —SANA May '77
—At least 25 detainees have died in detention since March of 1976, according to a September, 1977 report by the African National Congress.

BANNING: At the end of 1976, 146 banning orders were in force. Of these 50 were put into effect during the year. —Focus 10 May '77

PASS LAW VIOLATIONS:
—Nearly 10.5 million Africans were arrested under pass laws between 1948 and 1973. —X Ray Nov./Dec. 1975
—In 1976, 250,000 Africans were arrested under the pass laws and related influx control laws. —Focus 10 May '77

SOWETO

"Soweto is a bastard child born out of circumstances following the dispossession of the African people and the discovery of gold in the Witwatersrand. It was born out of white greed and racism perpetrated against the Africans." A Window on Soweto, by Joyce Sikakane

A survey of 186 homes in Soweto, selected by random sampling methods, was carried out in late 1975 by the University of Witwatersrand's Department of Pediatrics. Among the findings:
  * 61% of families have incomes below the poverty level.
  * Among children 10-12, 45% have malnutrition.
  * Average household size is five or more people, the average household has 2.5 beds.
  * 87% of homes use candles for light. Only 5% have electricity or gas.
  * Only one-quarter of adults have gone beyond elementary school.
