REPORTING WITH SLIDES & TAPES ON

5 WEEKS with FRELIMO
in LIBERATED MOZAMBIQUE

A FRELIMO unit shot down this French-built Alouette helicopter in the Cabo Delgado province of Mozambique on July 14 this year. The helicopter was hit by a mortar shell when troops were disembarking from it.

Robert Van Lierop, a Black American lawyer and Board member of the American Committee on Africa, and Bob Fletcher, a free-lance photographer, have just returned from a five-week trip with FRELIMO inside Niassa Province in liberated Mozambique. The trip was made especially to record on film and tape not only the progress in the military struggle against Portuguese colonialism, but also the building of a new society in free Mozambique. They are the first American team to make the trip and they want to build American understanding of and support for the liberation struggle in Mozambique.
